FOREWORD

Singing is the universal medium of musical expression, and assembly or group singing contributes vitally to the artistic and spiritual nature as well as to the growth of individuality and character.

"Assembly Songs and Choruses" is more than a collection. It presents songs that make a strong appeal to the interest and normal moods of young people. The aim has been to "re-create the moods of life." So there are songs of joy, reflection, courage, hope, and heroism; songs of fun, sport, and adventure; songs of sentiment, contemplation, and devotion; songs of beauty, aspiration, and achievement. All emphasize the keynote of this book, which is loyalty, optimism, and joy. Here indeed is an opportunity for expressing those finer emotions which make us human.

The topical index lists the songs as to origin and subject. Many nationalities are represented in the folk songs, and memories and traditions of other lands are perpetuated through simple, charming melodies. The "well-known songs" are really the home songs, and here are ballads, lullabies, songs of the sea, and even those stirring yet plaintive Southern tunes which have swayed hearts for many years. Then there are the hymns, the carols, the student songs, and the patriotic songs, where brotherhood and peace, goodness and freedom, loyalty and service, find worthy expression in music that is stirring and dignified.

The large number of master composers, whose compositions appear under "art songs" and "operatic and oratorio excerpts," include such names as Bach, Mozart, Beethoven, Handel, Haydn, Schubert, Schumann, Verdi, Gounod, Wagner, Sullivan, Brahms, Mendelssohn, Mascagni, Grieg, Bizet, Rubinstein, Franz, and Dvořák. And with these great musicians appear the names of such poets as Whittier, Longfellow, Tennyson, Burns, Moore, Stanton, Heine, Goethe, Gould, Lowell, Stowe, Hemans, Brooks, Scollard, Elson, Hay, Bates, McCarthy, and Waterman. The texts have been selected not only because they are lyrical and adequately meet the demands of the music, but also because in range of thought and emotional content they are an important part of the singing experience and because they express joy and idealism.

With arrangements which are artistic and suitable to average vocal conditions, the material on these pages cannot fail to cultivate a love for wholesome, vigorous, and imaginative music, a more intimate acquaintance with the great melodies of the masters, and a capacity for enjoying the moods out of which good music springs.

Therefore it is evident that the aim of this book is to make music the greatest possible force not only in the school but also in the home and community, to stimulate an appreciation of American ideals and American institutions. Through its pages may we hear "the true heart of our country singing as never before, with a harmony rich and deep as human brotherhood itself."

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

In the selection and preparation of the material for "Assembly Songs and Choruses" the editors have derived much benefit from the coöperation of a large number of educators and musicians. Many directors of music have carefully examined each selection for the beauty of the music, the literary merit of the text, the artistic quality of the arrangement, contrast in mood, the appeal to young people, and the value in a general musical program.

It is not possible to present all the names of those who have contributed definite and constructive suggestions that have made the book more valuable and effective.

Acknowledgment is due to Houghton Mifflin Company for permission to use "Sail On, O Ship of State," "Stars of the Summer Night," and "I Heard the Bells," by Henry W. Longfellow, "Immortal Love" and "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," by John Greenleaf Whittier, "Once to Every Man and Nation," by James Russell Lowell, "Lord of All Being," by Oliver Wendell Holmes; to G. Schirmer for permission to use "The Home Road," by John Alden Carpenter, "The Owl and the Pussy Cat," by George Ingraham; to Theodore Presser Company for permission to use "Sweet Miss Mary," by W. H. Neidlinger; and to Henry Turner Bailey for permission to quote in the Foreword the closing lines from "I Heard America Singing."

1. List our lay of La Pa-lisse, For its puz-zles will em-ploy you;
2. La Pa-lisse was gen-tly bred, And he looked a dain-ty dan-dy,
3. La Pa-lisse went off to war And he then grew high and haugh-ty;

p

We shall sing un-til we cease, And a-muse or else an-noy you.
Kept his hat up-on his head And his col-lar spick and spand-y.
Lost his life at Pa-vi-a, As he real-ly ought not, ought he?

mf

La Pa-lisse was poor as mice, Though his an-ces-tors were plen-ty,
La Pa-lisse was so po-lite That his smile be-came a simp-er,
Should at last our trou-bles cease, 'Twere no fault of La Pa-liss-e's,

Made his for-tune in a trice, And of francs had four and twen-ty.
Nev-er an-gry, day or night, On-ly when he lost his tem-per.
So we'll let him rest in peace With-out pick-ing up the piec-es.

COME, YE THANKFUL PEOPLE, COME

St. George's, Windsor

GEORGE J. ELVEY

mf

1. Come, ye thank-ful peo-ple, come, Raise the song of har-vest home;
 2. All the world is God's own field, Fruit un-to His praise to yield;
 3. For the Lord our God shall come, And shall take His har-vest home;

All is safe-ly gath-ered in, Ere the win-ter storms be-gin;
 Wheat and tares to-geth-er sown, Un-to joy or sor-row grown.
 From His field shall in that day All of-fenc-es purge a-way;

God, our Mak-er, doth pro-vide For our wants to be sup-plied;
 First the blade, and then the ear, Then the full corn shall ap-pear;
 Give His an-gels charge at last In the fire the tares to cast,

Come to God's own tem-ple, come, Raise the song of har-vest home.
 Lord of har-vest, grant that we Whole-some grain and pure may be.
 But the fruit-ful ears to store In His gar-ner ev-er-more.
